

Bank of Japan organizes a swine influenza response team

April 28, 2009

Bank of Japan

Today, the Bank of Japan, in view of the actions taken by the Japanese Government, organized a swine influenza response team, headed by the Governor.

The response team, in cooperation with the Government, local governments, financial institutions, etc., will gather relevant information, and, in order to ensure that the Bank can continue providing essential central banking services under evolving conditions, aims to enhance the effectiveness of the Bank's business continuity arrangements.
